

MILLET'S BODY CREMATED

New York Times

Friday 3 May 1912

BOSTON, May 2---A throng of men and women stood with heads uncovered in the train shed in the North Station to-day when the coffins containing the bodies of Frank D. Millet, the artist, and Richard P. [sic] White of Winchenden was removed to the chapel at Mount Auburn Cemetery, where funeral services were held.

A large floral piece from President Taft occupied a prominent place on the cremated, and the ashes will be taken to East Bridgewater, to be interred in the family plot.

'60 of Harvard University, with many friends, relatives, and former associates of the artist attended the funeral.

Courtesy of Mark Baber

Copyright Encyclopedia Titanica - www.encyclopedia-titanica.org 1996-2012 and third parties (ref: #11256)
URL : <http://www.encyclopedia-titanica.org/milletts-body-cremated-11256.html>

PDF edition provided for personal reference only.

